Who are some of the student's closest friends in choir? (If we are at an off-campus event, and either a director is trying to contact the student, or the student is in the infirmary and the director needs information from another on-site student, which friends would know the student personally and be available to assist a director if needed?)

We want it to be clear that we have a high standards and expectations for the behavior of all program participants. If a student makes a choice to possess or participate in vaping they will receive the following consequences in addition to the campus discipline assigned to students detailed in the CCISD Student Code of Conduct.

CONSEQUENCES:

Permission to Communicate with a CCHS Choir Student's Private Music Instructor

Many of our CCHS Choir students take voice, piano, music theory, or instrumental private lessons on their own time. In the CCHS Choir Department, we value collaboration and seek out ways to teach meaningful music-related lessons to our students. In an effort to stay informed about our students' progress in private lessons and to continue seeking out new and innovative ways to offer more personalized learning in our classroom, the CCHS Choir Directors may wish to speak directly with a student's private music instructor throughout the school year.

Conversations with private teachers can include any aspect of a student's progress in lessons and/or in the choir classroom including aspects of tone quality, breath support, intonation, phonation, posture, background musical knowledge, contest preparation, audition preparation, teaching strategies that are working and not working, progress in specific areas, pedagogical techniques, etc. With all teachers (private and CCHS Choir) working together, we are better able to help the students' progress.

Due to privacy laws, we are required to attain parent permission in order to speak with a non-CCISD employee about a student's progress in school. By signing below, you are giving the CCHS Choir Directors permission to speak with your child's private music instructor about choir-related issues throughout the school year in an effort to give your child a more complete music education.
